The Chief's Desk

Good morning from beautiful Glendale, AZ and the Baggers Meeting! Spending two days in the valley with some of the top minds in the fire service from around the United States. Always quality conversation as we discuss challenges facing the fire service. Doesn't seem to matter the state, or even the country, the challenges we face here and the challenges everyone else faces are the same or similar. Change the names and we all have the same players.

Wednesday night this week we celebrated our recent recruit class graduation, Charlie's retirement, and the swearing in of five new planning/logistics, prevention, and administrative personnel. It was fantastic to see how many families turned out along with so many of you. As always, the Honor Guard along with Pipes and Drums did an outstanding job representing our organization. We were fortunate to have a couple of our Captains testing evaluators, one from Scottsdale FD and one from Northwest FD, attend the event. They both approached Chief Feddema afterward to compliment CAFMA regarding our ceremony. Both were impressed by the turn out, as well as the efforts we take to honor our personnel and their families. It's nice to have an outside perspective from a couple of the larger agencies in the state.

We also had two county supervisors, Craig Brown and Mary Mallory, attend Wednesday evening. It was a very nice gesture for them to come out and support our graduates, new hires, and retiree. Additionally, Directors Packard, Zurcher, and Gentile attended to show their support for all of our folks.

Engineers and Captains testing is complete and all participants have been notified of their scores. The Chief's interviews will be scheduled for some time in December. We have to wait for participants to review their test results, and then wait for the 30-day grievance period to end.

Next up will be the Assistant Chief testing process on December 10th and 11th. The AC positions were posted internally yesterday. I believe that BC testing is scheduled for January followed by new firefighter testing. We're also looking at a test for an assistant warehouse position in February. Monies for the warehouse position will come from the budgeted special duty pay for the warehouse that is not used, as well as monies that had been budgeted for Alex's position in Tech Services. Alex will be leaving his position in January or February which opens those funds up for use by the warehouse. We initially thought we might be able to split Andy's time between Facilities and Warehouse, however given the work load in facilities we simply cannot pull Andy to have him spend any time working with the original Erik.

As you can see Patty and her staff are very busy going from one testing process to another while still trying to get the regular duties of Human Resources completed. Thank you all for your efforts!

NM ambulance service, fire dept. at odds over transport authority

By: Mike Gallagher

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — “Level Zero” is the phrase at the heart of a legal fight between Albuquerque Fire and Rescue and privately owned Albuquerque Ambulance Service over the city’s proposed expansion of its authority to have AFR rescue units transport patients to the hospital.

In most cases, AFR rescue units stabilize patients on scene and Albuquerque Ambulance then takes them to the emergency room – allowing the Fire and Rescue units to return to service for new 911 calls.

When Albuquerque Ambulance has no units able to respond immediately to 911 calls, its dispatchers announce “Level Zero” over the radio.

The sharp uptick in “Level Zero,” the city says, shows the ambulance service doesn’t have enough staffed units deployed and translates into AFR rescue units spending too much time waiting at a scene for Albuquerque Ambulance to show up and transport a patient.

Albuquerque Ambulance, part of the Presbyterian Healthcare Services system, says the city’s concerns are overblown.

But no one disputes the system is under stress as 911 calls for nearly every type of medical emergency – ranging from overdoses to chest pain to shootings to “down and out” on a sidewalk – have increased. Last year, Albuquerque Fire and Rescue responded to more than 96,000 such calls.

As Paradise rebuilds, a divide over safety a year after deadly Camp Fire

By: Don Thompson

PARADISE, Calif. — There was “no way in hell” Victoria Sinclair was rebuilding in Paradise.

She’d thought she was going to die during the six hours it took her to escape the deadliest and most destructive wildfire in California history.

Sinclair and tens of thousands of others in nearby communities fled the wind-whipped inferno that killed 85 people and incinerated roughly 19,000 homes, businesses and other buildings on Nov. 8, 2018.

Despite her vow to stay away, Sinclair’s family was one of the first to rebuild, braving the enduring threat of wildfires, and now, repeated power outages as the nation’s largest utility tries to prevent its equipment from sparking blazes on windy days like it did in Paradise a year ago.

Weeks after the wildfire, Sinclair had an epiphany. She returned to the ruins of her home and felt more at peace than any time since the fleeing the flames, even as she stood in the ashes of her living room.

"I want people to see that Paradise is a place to return home to," Sinclair said. "The scars run deep here, but so do the roots that help it grow."

"Rebuilding the Ridge" is a rallying cry on signs around town, evoking the beauty and peril of rebuilding on a wind-swept jut of land poking out of the Sierra Nevada and begging the question: Will the resurgent community be safer this time?

Station 53's remodel project is complete and the crew is back in quarters. I have not had a chance to see it in person, but the pictures I've seen look really nice. Hopefully the crews like the way it turned out and are comfortable in their new digs. Station 61 crews may be a bit jealous of 53 since they've spent four months and counting in the conference room in Chino. That project has drug along at a snail's pace for any number of reasons. Chief Bliss met with representatives of Haley Construction this past Monday to express his concerns about the delays. We certainly understand the difficulty in finding subcontractors, and working with a remodel project. However, things have taken longer than they should even with the aforementioned issues. Haley understands our concerns, and is working to address them the best they can at this point. The quality of the project is not in question, just the time.

Tech Services is working to update all of our Microsoft Systems. As you saw from an email Jonah sent this week, there have been some challenges with the Outlook Calendar. They have a tool to fix the issue and can walk you through the process over the phone. If you have not checked your calendar, I would highly recommend that you take a close look.

Fleet is getting closer to having two rescues up and ready for service. One was donated by Sun City Fire and the other is the unit from CARTA that has been used for training. We may have at least one of them in service by the first part of December, or sooner. Daisy Mountain FD has donated the use of a couple older gurneys for the rescues. We certainly appreciate their support.

As you may recall, in September the Bureau of EMS put out a survey asking about changes related to Certificates of Necessity (CONs) as outlined in Article 9. They sent a link to the results on October 24th, and requested additional input related to the results. The latest survey will close on November 18th. In short, respondents recommended sweeping changes to Article 9 to include defining geographic areas, tightening response times based on national standards, and changing the CON process to allow the Director to determine need.

In its current form, an applicant submits an application for a CON with a $100 fee. The Bureau then sends letters to CON holders in or surrounding the area included in the application. If any of the current CON holders choose to intervene, your application is sent through a court process with an administrative law judge (ALJ). Court costs for many applicants have exceeded $1 million dollars. Once the ALJ hands down their recommendation, the Director of DHS has the opportunity to review the application, the ALJ's recommendation, and determine need. The Director does not have to follow the ALJ's recommendation.

Unfortunately, the system in its current form is backwards, costly, holds communities' hostage, does not take into account community or patient needs, and prevents competition even from other private entities. This was all outlined in a 1999 AZ Auditor General's Report. The report was also critical of the Bureau's lack of handling of complaints. Twenty years has passed since the report and nothing has changed. Honestly, replace 1999 with 2019 and you have an up to date report critical of the Bureau, DHS, and their processes. It's truly unfortunate.

The board requested at our September meeting that I draft a White Paper related to ambulance issues in our areas, and what we have done to address them. A draft is complete and has gone through a couple of peer reviews. It is currently being edited by Susanne/Kathy, and then will be sent out for another peer review prior to being submitted to the board. If the board approves the document, it will be made public and be shared with our elected officials as well as state associations. I'll ensure it goes out to all CAFMA employees as well.
